The city auditor's report of approved bills to the amount of $545.77 was read and on motion of Ald. Bates the bills were ordered paid.

The following communication from the board of instruction, which explains itself, was read and referred to the committee on schoolhouses, with power:

To the Committee on Schoolhouses of the City Councils of the City of Portsmouth, Mr. A. S. Brown, Chairman: Gentlemen-The board of instruction by requests your honorable board to av new floors in the two upstairs rooms of the Cabot street schoolhouse. The requent complaints from parcuts are presented to the board of instruction or its members. Hespectfully, J. C. Simpson,

Sec. Board of Instruction. Ald. Gray asked about the floors in motion that the former resolution be amended to include laying floors in that schoolhouse. Ald. Bates asked the chairman on schoolhouses what was being done at the Bartlett schoolhouse, and was told that the building was being painted, the roof repaired and the seats and desks being put in order. Ald. Hallam stated that the floors were in a very bad condition and the carpenters at work there suggested that a new floor should be laid. The amendment as offered by Ald. Gray was carried. A well- as soon as their engagements are comdressed woman was being waited upon pleted. when from one of the numerous bundles under her arm there dropped a pint bottle of whiskey. As it struck the floor the stopper came out and the contents was soon fast running out.

The woman made a grab for the bottle and succeeded in saving about two table-spoonfuls in the bottom. Without moment's hesitation she put the bottle to her lips and what was saved she swallowed in a thrice. The clerk watched the proceedings with astonish ment as a number of customers were in the store at the time and were wit nesses to the little incident.

After taking the little nip the woman gathered up her bundles, paid the clerk, and passed out without the least embarrassment.

"Madame, would you mind if I acompanied Francois to his mother's Lione?

"No, I am perfectly willing, but be "Madame may be assured of that. We shall be here long before 11. Pierre is down stairs, and if madame should need anything"-All right. You may go, Mariette and remember, II o'clock.

The Countess of Larspare had left her hat an in the neighborhood of Compregne, and leaving all her servants, with the exception of her maid, whom she took with her to Trouville, intended to stay a few weeks in Pari-long enough to see all that was new and inten sing-and divert berself with whatver offered itself in the way of novelty. Marrette, her maid, was delighted with the idea of the short sojourn in Paris, for she could see her fiance, a brother of the janitor of the apartment in which they were stopping. Mine Laispare, a pretty widow, was a frifle fatigued by a day spent in going from tailor to dressmaker, from dressmaker to milliner. She was stretched comfortably in a recliring chair, and her whole attention after her maid's departure, was centered in a book she was reading. It was intensely interesting, and she read on until midnight withour noticing how quickly time was Passing. The sound of the clock striking 12 aroused her. "Is it possible! I had no idea it was so late. And where is Mariette?" Sure that her maid had not yet re turned, she passed out on the little balcony from her drawing room, overlook-

mg Friedland avenue, and began looking yamly for the figures of Mariette and Francots. After a short time, as they did not appear, she began to feel auxious and a little trutated. In her impatience she struck her foot repeatedly against the iron railing of the balcony, and directly the holl of her slipper caught in from her foot, and, falling, just escaped the face of a late promenador who stood star gazing beneath the balcony. He attend a startled exclamation and, sto-gang in amazement, he picked un the massile booked at it turned t over, then, carrying it to the story lamp, examined it carefully. His surprised look gave was to one of amused aleasure. In fact, the slipper completely collipsed the legendary one of Cin-

"Well," said he to himself, "let" begin. This slipper didn't fall on my head from beaven. It came, evidently from that lighted window. I thought l eay a figure there a moment ago. Well, then, mere goes,"

Concrabed in a coance of the balcony. the centress had watched the pantomime, feeling all the time a strong desire to laugh. The man, in autoreaching the light, had given her a chance to observe him minutely. He appeared young he was all that could be desired. The young woman told herself that he had a very distinguished air, and so she felt not at all alarmed when he approached the door of the building and rang the

As no one responded the first time, a second followed it, and then a third, prolonged, energetic and loud, which met with no greater success than the first two.

"He will waken every one in the apartment house except that sleepy headed janitor. What shall I do? I don't see anything but to go and open it myself.'

And accepting her part boldly the rountess descended the stairs, blaming Mariette severely for having put her in such a position. Opening the door a erack, she said:

"A thousand apologies, monsieur, and please give it to me quickly." But such haste was entirely outside the plans of M. de la Briere, the man who held the alipper.

"In truth, madanie, I regret exceedingly not being able to grant your coquest, but the object which I have just found is, I think, rather precious, and you will understand that I feel a certain responsibility. If the slipper is yours, it will of course fit you, and will you allow me to assure myself by the formality of trying it on?"

"Your conscience, monsieur, has a very keen edge, but as you are not satisfled in seeing me-standing here on one foot I suppose I must submit to the proof you ask for." She seated herself in one of the large antique chairs in the hall and putting out her little foot watched him as he gravely fitted the slipper upon it. The instant it was on the foot was withdrawn and disappeared beneath her skirt, while Rene do la Briere arose, somewhat disconcerted. Mmc. the grace did not hide the authority. But at the moment when, decidedly chagrined and confused. Rene was giout to obey the command a loud report made itself heard a little distance from them.

The countess, never thinking that it was the eve of July 14, a day which all Paris celebrates with every variety of demonstration, thought only of a pistol shot and robbers. Remembering that she was alone, she grew frightened and wished to keep with her the stranger whom she had already impressively dismissed. Rene understood the situation in an instant and determined what part he would play in the little drama. Bowing profusely, he made as if to con-Singe his departure. "Monsiour, did you not hear it?"

"Perfectly, madame; a pistol shot." "Then there are threves in the neighborhood:''

"It is very probable, and now that. think of it I remember observing a little while ago a very villainous looking fellow prowling about." "I have heard no cry"-

"Perhaps the shot missed." "Are you not risking something in going out now?" "Without doubt, madaine. But I do not see any other way. You have shown me clearly that my presence here is inopportune, and I do not wish to in trude.

"Really, monsieur, I am afraid for you, and, to be frank, for myself too. My maid has not yet returned, and if I were not afraid of troubling you I would ask you to wait until she comes in." Rene blessed his lucky star and replied respectfully, "I am happy to do ven so small a service." The hall was lighted brightly, and they seated themselves in the big chairs, There was a moment's awkward pause, and then M. de la Biere told his name and the countess followed his example which put them at their case. A liter ary man of great takent and merited reputation, a thorough man of the world. Reperwas able to judge Mine.

Rene dared to ask her if, young and pretty as she was, she had never thought of marying again. She responded with sudden sadness that her marriage had not made her happy; that her husband had not treated her with great kindness. Her illusions had been so utterly destroyed that she felt certain the only chance of happiness lay in keeping forever her liberty, full and entire. TARILE LAW WORKS WELL.

Washington, July 25 .- An official statement has been terrived at the treasury b partment showing that under the present tariff law the amount of duty collected daring the last fiscal year on the and good looking; in dress and bearing | personal effects of sie and hip passengers arriving in this country was about 400 ber cent, in excess of the amount reseived during the previous fiscal year. $313,518, or about $1 per capita as against $92,512, or 91/2 cents per capita for the brevious vear.

Profit From Poultry and Fruit, The orchard is never injured by fowls, but, on the contrary, excellent work is done by poultry in destroying insects. According to an exchange, every one who has an orchard and does not keen a flock is losing a profit that is more easily secured than in any other manner with poultry, as there is no additional interest on land to add to the cost. The free range of the orchard, with the trees for shade, will assist in greater egg production and when the hons have broads of chicks there is no better location than to make each ben comfortable in a little run under a tree, where the chicks can be permitted to have their freedom. It is not well to have the grass too-high in an orchard if fowls are to use the ground. A well kept orchard is the one to use, and a combination of poultry and fruit gives the farmer a profit from the fowls while waiting for his young trees to come into hearing.

conquered his shyness. At the time of the commune he was in Paris with his aid-de-camp. There was also stopping at the same hotel a charming American woman with whom he was slightly acquainted. The prisoners had been liberated and were rushing madly through the streets. The order had also been given that all windows and shutters must be kept closed. Shut up in her dark room and hearing the noisy rabble below, the woman became greatly alarmed.

"There is but one thing for me to do," she cried, "to insure safety. I will put myself under the care of the American general." She therefore sent her card to Sheridan, who at once called and offered his services. He also advised that she should join his party in the morning and get away to London. Still she appeared distressed. Finally she cried: "It is my bonnets at Virot's. They were to have been down today. How can I go and leave them?" The general grasped the situation and offered his arm to escort her to the milliner's. Happily it was not far off. Ever afterward ho delighted to tell of his pleasure at seeing such an array of dainty headgear. He had never been at a milliner's before.—New York Sun.

Washington, July 28.—Secretary Day ind Asistant Secretary Moore were doseted together for a large part of the fixing your type day yesterday, and the written outlines of a basis of peace to be sent to Spain in response to her message of inquiry will soon be ready for submission to a special meeting of the cabinet. The full details, of course, are carefully concealed, but it may be said with assurance that the terms as they will appear in this first draft will be:

> First-The withdrawal of Spanish authority from Cuba, with the understanding that, under a protectorate established by the United States, the Cuban people will be permitted to set up a stable gov-

Third-The settlement of the Philippine problem by some form of conference or commission, from which the United States will claim a maximum of commercial and strategic advantage, combined with a minimum of governmental responsibilities.

The Ladrones, the Carolines and the rest of the smaller conquests we have made or may hereafter make, will play to part in the negotiations, or at least o the extent of interfering in any way with prompt agreement upon terms of

One member of the cabinet who took a eading part in the informal discussions at the White House last evening, said oday that our ultimate holding of the Philippines would probably not extend seyond a single island.

One thing which makes the administration besitate to accept Spanish pages advances as made in entire good faith is her choice of a junction of affairs for making them. The recent agitation of the Philippine question with Germany in the foreground as a self-appointed party to its settlement, is regarded by the Spanish government, as ours happens to know, as a very opportune thing. The idea is that the fate of the Philippanes is one of the matters to be decided when the terms of peace come up for consideration, and that Germany's titude has placed us in an embarrass: ng position. Having no desire to rush into another war if it can be avoided monorably. Spain believes that we would

e amposed to get out of our Philippin muddle as cheaply as possible, and that would be by heeding Germany's disguised warnings and making terms which will practically hand back the islands to Spain. This covers the motive of her choice of time, and has made our government rather more independent than it would ordinarily be in the manner of receiving Spain's overtures But recent events have contributed, also, to the ease with which we could relinquish our grip upon the Philippines as a whole without loss of dignity or caus of self reproach. The party chiefly responsible for relieving us of our embar rassment is General Aguinaldo himself who while he has justly commended himself to our administration by his course of moderation and ordinary adherence to the rules of civilized warfare, has had his undisciplined vanity unduly swelled by his success at arms. Private advices received here show that the Philippine insurgents generally are as uncertain of temper as our Cuban allies in the province of Santiago. Though receiving every kindness at the hands of the Americans, they have refused to aid when we needed it and turned upon us in a distinctly hostile spirit upon more than one ocasion. Their present leader encouraged their folly by his example the other day in proclaiming his dictatorship and the absolute independence of his republic. The news of the step was very briefly given in the published official dispatches, but the details which were not given to the presss showed that dispose of the Philippines. It was the changed attitude of the Philippine rebels towards us and our onsequent relief from embarrassment on their account which inspired the statement so freely made by the president lately, that he considered the conditions ripe for peace negotiations, and that we might therefore witness the beginning at almost any time. The present opening is considered in the administration circle only tentative. Spain is expected, indeed, to reject our terms when we first name them, but a series of "backs and fills" are expected to bring out something satisfactory by and Ample evidence is furnished that cabinct officers were in carnest when they said that Spain's overtures toward peace would not retard the aggressive campalgns of the United States military and naval forces. Not only are the preparations for conquering Porto Rico going ahead without the slightest disposition on the part of the authorities to be influenced by the presentation of the Spanish note, but the naval admin istration is equally active in expediting its plans for pushing the enemy. M. Cambon's visit to the White House on Tuesday night very naturally has been construed to have ended the usefulness of the much-discussed formation of war: ships officially designated the eastern squadron, but better known as Watson's fleet. Inquiry at the navy department, however, shows that this is not the case. The vessels of the eastern squadron are being prepared for active service without regard to diplomatic department has not taken any official cognizance of Spain's admission that she wants the war to end. Proof that the aggressiveness of the havy department has not been affected by the diplomatic status given to the war by the presentation of the Spanish note is further in evidence in orders sent to Captain Higginson of the battleship Massachusetts, now at Guanica, Porto Rico, with the transports of General Miles' expedition, to hold his vessel in readiness for departure with the other notes and consideration of peace propo

witions. It is shown by the unreserved

remarks of navai officials that the navy vessels of Commodore Watson's command. Meanwhile the work of getting the eastern squadron in condition for a long voyage is progressing at Guantanamo, where most of the warships are. Such of the vessels as are in need of extensive overhauling through their long service in tropical waters will be recalled to the United States to be placed in dry dock, but the others are being cleaned, re-Laired and generally restored with the meagre facilities affored at such a distance from a mavy yard. Divers are at work cleaning the bottoms of Watson's ships, and the crew of the repair ship Vulcan is kept very busy indeed. This activity, it is explained, means that the wavy department is taking no chances of an abortive ending of the peace proposais, and whatever be the result the fleet in West Indian waters will be in prime condition in a very short time. It can he stated on the authority of the state department and the foreign embassies here that there were no overtures in behalf of Spain for peace or a cessation of hostilities until the French ambassador last Tuesday afternoon presented his note to the president. This statement is made with full knowledge of European denials, and must be acepted as that of the government of the United States. Therefore, all of the talk about bad faith shown by our government in pressing the Porto Rican ampaign during the last few days is ibsolutely without foundation, and our government has done nothing that can subject it to criticism on this score.

Persons qualified to speak for Spain n this country make the same statement. The alleged charges of bad faith against the United States attributed to Premier Sagasta are discredited as inventions designed to prejudice the successful progress of the present peace movement. It could not be contemplated for a moment that any mere personal exchange of views between persons in Europe could be construed as an overture for peace, and it can be again affirmed that the United States government has not been a party to it. Moreover, so far as Ambassador Cambon is concerned, it can be stated positively that he made no overture, direct or in direct, official or unofficial, relating to peace or to any phase of peace, prior to o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Military authorities regard Premier Sagasta's alleged statement that peace with malarial fever. overtures operate to stay the course of military operations as little short of amazing, and directly contrary not only to the military law of the United States but to the whole recignized principles of international law. In general the international law writers agree that military operations stop only when a truce or an armistice is actually concluded, and that this truce or armistice must be in writing. Until then the mere preliminary overture toward a suspension of hostilities is not regarded as any warrant for stopping the war. The military authorities, as well as the pecific regulations of the United States. hold that there is no suspension of hostilities prior to the agreement to suspend military operations. Even then the agreement is binding on military | property is insured.

The employes of the Electric Light station have got a joke on one of their fellow workmen. He was sent up town Thursday afternoon after some sticky made his purchase all right but meeting a friend in the store who had a team out side, asked him if he would take the fly paper and etc. down to the station. The friend consented to and told him to put the things in his team.

The electric light man was happy and went out and put the articles on the seat of a team which he thought behe made a mistake and instead, well perhaps that Greenland farmer thought anyway Jim is setting up the cigars.
